About the Indian Society of Victimology

The Indian Society of Victimology (ISV) is a national level professional society that was founded in 1992 under the aegis of Professor K. Chockalingam, the then Head of the Department of Criminology, University of Madras along with senior police officers Dr. R. K. Raghavan and Mr. L. N. Venkatesan. The Society was formally inaugurated by the eminent jurist, late Hon'ble Mr. Justice V. R. Krishna Iyer, Former Judge of the Supreme Court of India. Over the last 27 years, the Society has made significant contributions towards victims' rights as enshrined in the UN Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power, 1985, advocating the cause of victims of crime and abuse of power in India and abroad through its conferences, workshops, seminars, and symposia on a wide range of victimological topics. The members of the Society come from a global fraternity of criminologists and victimologists, government officials, criminal justice stakeholders, scholars, students and practitioners. Today, there are over 500 members who contribute to the field of Victimology through research, victim services and advocacy. The Society is closely associated with other international organizations including the World Society of Victimology.(For further details about the ISV visit www.isvindia.webs.com)

About the University of Madras

The University of Madras is one of the oldest premier universities in India and a forerunner in many academic programmes since inception in 1857. The University has made significant contributions to the cause of higher education and research in the country and is one among the first five universities to receive recognition from the University Grants Commission as a 'University with Potential for Excellence'. The University has grown into a large teaching and research affiliating body with 18 schools, 87 departments of post-graduate teaching and research, 121 affiliated colleges and 53 approved research institutions. The University has signed Memorandum of Understanding (MoUs) with 14 Foreign and 25 Indian Universities and also with 21 Industry/Service organizations. Nearly 141 sponsored research projects funded by various agencies are carried out in the University departments. Several alumni of the University have held distinguished positions in different fields of Law, Administration, Management, Science and Technology at the national and international level and the legacy continues even today.

An independent Department of Criminology was started by the University of Madras in April 1983 with functions of teaching and research. The Department specializes in the field of victimology, financial crime, police administration, human rights, juvenile justice, correctional administration, crime prevention, cyber forensics and others. The Department presently offers a Master's in Criminology, a Diploma in Juvenile Justice and Juvenile Psychology and a Ph.D. programme. The Department has signed MoUs with three international universities. The Department is actively engaged in research projects funded by various organizations such as University Grants Commission, Bureau of Police Research and Development, Indian Council of Social Science Research, National Commission for Women, United Nations Development Program, MasterCard Worldwide, UNICEF, Government of Tamil Nadu, and others. The Department also provides consultative and training services to the stakeholders of the criminal justice system, such as the Tamil Nadu State Judicial Academy and the Tamil Nadu Police Academy.
